Håfa Adai Dean Santos:

As I Maga'Lahen Guahan and a proud son of Guam, I have made it my priority to help our island move forward in its quest for self-determination. It has been more than 30 years since our island last held a plebiscite to determine the preferred political status of our island. While legal uncertainties hinder us from holding one today, I believe it is still important to determine where our people stand when it comes to the political future of Guam.

I personally would like to see a straw poll conducted so our people may voice their opinions through a non-binding vote. Whether free association, independence, or statehood prevails in this poll, there will finally be an indication of how our education campaign should proceed.

I would like to meet with you to discuss how we can collaborate on this endeavor, which would be one of the greatest steps towards self-determination to date.

Senseramente,

EDDIE BAZA CALVO
Governor of Guam
